CARELESSNESS in dress indicates a slackening of one's self-respect.

In these days of hustle and rush character estimates are formed quickly—the first impression counts, and nine times out of ten a man's character is read in his "clothes."

It is a simple matter to be certain on this question of sartorial correctness. The Parker-Bridget "label" in a suit is the guarantee—whether it be in a $10.00 model for the young man or a $40.00 model for the man who demands the finest fabrics made. Get acquainted with the

IMMENSE THROG SEES STARS WIN

Athletics Outclassed by Jim McAlleer's Team.

WALTER JOHNSON INVINCIBLE

Nationals' Great Twirler Holds Mack's Team Completely at His Mercy—Milan, Cobb, and Speaker Play Brilliantly—Morgan Hit Hard in Sixth—Eddie Collins Is Injured.

By WILLIAM PEET.
The champion Athletics, of the American League, and their traveling companions, erstwhile "stars" of various teams of the selfsame league, battled in the Capital City yesterday before a crowd of 7,000-odd persons, and the stars of the homecoming aggregation won from the Philadelphia contingent by a score of 4 to 1.

The Athletics were true to the tenets and reputation of the City of Brotherly Love and sleepiness, as is evidenced by the fact that Morgan "charitably" allowed the All-Stars to sweat out nine bingles, and the fielders were drowsy. Speaker poked his bat into the ball for a two-bagger and a single, and incidentally Tris poked his anatomy in the way of a swift one from Morgan also, and headliner Tyrus Cobb got his base twice, once on a single that he stretched into a two-bagger, and next upon a fielder's choice. His base running was one of the features of the game and nary a player of the Athletics played "back" for him.

Collins Is Injured.
Eddie Collins injured his foot in the fourth session and was relieved by McInnis in the game and Dr. Cox in the clubhouse. His injury was not serious and he will play tomorrow.

Jake Stahl and Tris Speaker were accorded great applause on their first entrances, and both of these Bostonese played a snappy game, the former being much in evidence at the bat, while Stahl used splendid judgment in running the bases after his accession to the first bag via a base on balls in the sixth.

Milan, first up, hit for three bases, which somewhat disconcerted Morgan; Lord struck out, and Tris Speaker slammed a bingle that brought in the first score.

Morgan tightened up for the four next innings and allowed only one hit. However, in the sixth, Speaker smacked a two-bagger out to the right field and speedily sped home on Elberfeld's smash. Jake Stahl and McBride scored also in this inning, and that was an end of run-getting so far as the so-called "All-Stars" were concerned.

Johnson In Great Form.
Johnson was invincible, and pitched a great game. It is true several long flies were sent outfieldward by the Athletics, but those baseball bulwarks that Jimmy McAlleer has placed in the outfield, Milan, Speaker, and Cobb, took care of every fly that came their way.

The consensus of opinion of the on-lookers is that the Athletics have adopted the very best means of getting into shape for the championship games with the Cubs by playing this pre-season series with this strong combination of players, and while it may seem to some that the Athletics' showing is poor, yet it is strongly evident that the Athletics are not exerting themselves to the utmost, and are wisely taking no risks at this time. This is not a lack of integrity, but rather valiant discretion.

NOTES OF THE GAME.
Milan's three-sacker hit the fence. Plaudits followed plaudits as each player came to the plate until it reminded one of commencement exercises in our home towns.

Jake Stahl's entrance was the signal for cheers and handclapping, followed by a familiar chant from the bleacherettes, the burden of which was, "Same old Jake."

Don't tell us that the throwing arms of the Athletics catchers are all at the bottom. Evidence this: Merry-souled catcher Livingston slammed out at second Cobb, Speaker, and Stahl, three of the speediest runners of the "nine varieties."

Even if Cobb is not destined to enjoy the music of the carburetor of that "vapor buggy," he evidenced enjoyment of a like sound that was simulated in the applause he got when he first came to the bat.

was over, or was he thinking of that automobile contest?

Quoth genial "Billy" Lehman, the Cerebus of the past game: "Sorry, folks; but the free list is suspended."

In the fourth Cobb speedily sprinted over to the clubhouse and gathered Davis' fly, while peering in the window at Jimmy McAlleer, who was figuring out his profits.

McInnis replaced Eddie Collins at second in the fifth.

Tris Speaker's two-sacker in the fifth bumped the club house.

In the sixth Morgan and Davis, correctly scoring, should be credited with half an error each for letting Elberfeld get first bag.

McBride figured in a double play where in he gobbed Dyerg's boulder and after touching second, retiring Livingston, completed a double play by slamming the ball promptly to Stahl.

"Dutch" Schaefer's antics on the batting line were reminiscent of Hughie Jennings and Arlie Latham. Eddie Foy gathered many new comedy points by closely observing "Dutch."

In the fourth session Ty Cobb slammed one to center and stretched the single bingle into a two-bagger.

Why not have Ty presented with an aeroplane?

Murphy flung a hot liner down Walter Johnson's way and it speeded so swiftly that the ball caromed off Johnson's glove and went down near second. Walter went after the sphere and slammed Murphy out at first. Fine fielding, eh?

Pass to Chase with Bases Loaded Does It.

DEVLIN HITS THE BALL HARD

Third Sacker Cracks Out Homer and Double-Little Jack Warhop Twirls Good Ball—In Eighth Inning Highlanders Reach Southpaw Wiltsie.

The Final Score Is 5 to 4.

New York, Oct. 14.—With three men on bases and two out in the last half of the ninth inning, George Wiltsie handed a free ticket to Hal Chase and forced in Austin with the run that enabled the Highlanders to beat the Giants by a score of 5 to 4 at American League Park to-day. It was the second game of the local post-season series, and it bristled with thrilling baseball.

For seven innings the Giants held sway by a total of 2 to 1, chiefly due to a four-bagger by Arthur Devlin in the second inning, which sent Merkle home ahead of him. Three singles were bunched by McGraw's men in the next inning and another run resulted, but after that Warhop settled down and pitched so effectively that the polo grounds team gathered only one more hit, a double by Devlin, which scored another run in the ninth.

The Highlanders knocked out five singles off Wiltsie in the first seven innings, a base on balls being turned into a run in the fourth. But in the eighth inning Chase's men began to solve Wiltsie's three-handed shoots and, combining three-base hits with an error by Snodgrass, they tied the score. When Wiltsie finally went to pieces and the Highlanders won by sheer perseverance the Hilltop fans lost their senses and rushed upon the field yelling the Indians. It was a sensational finish, and squared accounts for the Giants' victory on Thursday.

The game was marred by several instances of unsportsmanlike conduct by the Giants, probably due to the general excitement and the extraordinary desire to win. While Devlin kept the Giants in the struggle by his splendid batting, he lost his head by attempting to interfere with Chase as he rounded third base on Knight's hit in the eighth inning. Chief Umpire Evans, however, saw Devlin in the act of blocking Chase and even trying to hold him, and he promptly ordered the run to count. Murray roughly bumped into Gardner when he was forced at second in the second inning, when he could easily have avoided a collision, while Doyle and Wiltsie kicked strenuously over a ruling that seemed to non-partisans to be eminently fair.

Wiltsie Finally Weakens.
Wiltsie was hit so hard, though, that he ran in the first inning that McGraw's man Crandall warmed up, but the left-hander tightened after that and did not show signs of weakening until the final stages of the conflict. Warhop pitched with great confidence all the way. He kept cool under fire, and using his puzzling raise ball he had the Giants, barring Devlin, at his mercy. He received brilliant support, particularly from Austin and Gardner, who was a marked improvement over Laporte at the infield's keystone.

The Giants played a dazzling game in the field, too, Fletcher flinging Bridwell's shoes at short field in capital style. It was a superb day for baseball. The sun was warm and a cool breeze blew across the Hudson River. The field was like a billiard table and the play was fast and snappy. The paid attendance was 10,365, the crowd filling the stands, but not being of sufficient size to warrant the use of ropes in the outfield. The gross receipts were $8,725.00, of which the players' share was $4,902.15, each clubowner received $1,610.05, and $872.50 went to the national commission. The crowd was about equally divided as to partisan feeling and at times the excitement bordered on delirium.

Meets Farmers at College Park. Clancy Has Sprained Ankle.
In the second game of the season for the Catholic University, the team will play the fast Maryland Agricultural College at College Park to-day. Catholic University has been hard at work for the past week in preparation for this game, but the prospects of returning to Brookland with the long end of the score received a decided setback Thursday, when Clancy, left half back, sprained his ankle so badly that he will be out of the game for some time.
During the past week the new players were put through a stiff course of sprouts. Among those who showed up well were Tibbitt, guard, who weighs 200 pounds, and Emerson, at tackle. Setback, at half back, also showed up to good advantage, and upon him will rest the responsibility of filling Clancy's position.

DOYLE BROTHERS CHAMPIONS

Defeat Holtzman and Britton with Perfect Ease.

Players Leave for Norfolk for Tennis Tourney—Prizes Awarded the Winners.

Before a big crowd at the Bachelors' courts C. Doyle and his brother, H. Doyle, defeated F. Holtzman and J. Britton for the double tennis championship of the District by the score of 6-1, 6-1, and 6-1. Holtzman and Britton were outclassed at the start of the match, and it was only a case of whether they would be able to score a game or not.

Conrad Doyle's all-round playing was the feature of the matches, as he was here, there, and everywhere, returning balls that nobody thought he could touch. Holtzman was the star for the losers, but could do nothing with the terrific smashes of the Doyle brothers.

The players will leave for Norfolk tonight, where they will be entered in the tourney in that city. The players were awarded the prizes which they had won in the events just closed. Howard received a silver cake dish, while Izard received the second prize, a silver fruit dish, in the men's singles. In the doubles Holtzman and Britton received silver candlesticks, and Morehead and Colton for second prize received leather-covered clocks, and for winning the consolation match Gore received a silver-trimmed decanter.
